MARCH ULTREYA

"I say this so that you may be saved" was the theme of the March Ultreya. Led by the grouping brothers of Greg Lilly, Rick Cavallari, Deacon Mike Rosolino and Tom Silliker, Greg served as moderator for the evening. Rick led the opening prayer and shared the scripture, John 5:31-47.

Deacon Mike Rosolino shared parts of the Obstacles to Grace talk from the Cursillo weekend. He likened obstacles to grace to the hurdles on a track field. They seem insurmountable, but when we let God help us the obstacles seem smaller. The first step to overcome our obstacles is to name them. Our cell phones, other electronics, schedules and business can be obstacles. An examination of conscience can help us identify our obstacles. The My Parish app has an examination of conscience for us to use. Once we identify our obstacles, the next step is how do we choose not to do that obstacle. Sometimes we can change the obstacle or recreate it. The third step is to use the sacrament of reconciliation and confess it. After reconciling is penance, to pray to the Lord to move forward. The last step is making the change. Recreating that obstacle so that it can be stepped over. When we do that we allow God in and allow God's grace to touch us.

Update: Our Ultreya Evangelization Efforts From Cathy King

Fr. Chris ordered the book “Beautiful Hope” to be given away at Easter Masses, with a parish registration form tucked inside. This is a very moving book with short reflections by various authors on how our faith that gives us hope is lived out.

The resource we received this month is an audio book for graduates. This will be a great gift for the parish to give to our graduates this year.

I will also be receiving a sample of a Bible study called “Turning Point.” This study takes stories from the Gospel of John about people’s transformative encounters with Jesus. By entering into their miraculous stories, we can encounter Jesus in a personal way and develop a deeper relationship with him that will transform our everyday lives. I’ll report on that next month.
